CAPT. DICKENSON, Princeton

By John Kieran

For a few hectic moments in the third period of the Columbia-Dartouth fracus at the Polo Grounds yesterday, it looked as though the Blue nd White might score an upset in the football world. They were leading y one single point at this stage and holding their enemies within reason. bounds, but little Halsey Mills threw his gear into high speed and the ig Green machine ran right over the New Yorkers in the last quarte oring sixteen points and winning by 28 to 7.

The lone touchdown that inspired ch high hopes in the breasts of naa fine forward pass by talder, of rimouth, to Burtt, of Columbia. It as spectacular in the extreme, and My appreciated by the Blue and hite. Jack Cannell had coached his schfield men in a variety of trick forard passes, but this one was a surise to the Dartmouth mentor, as well ! to the 15,000 innocent bystanders to too loose the Brush stadium Dartmouth Columbia celicate mixture of black and blue.

The Hanover Jester

Up Hanover way Halsey Mills is known as the gay jester of the New Hampshire town. He plays the part of the first lous housemaid or the giddy young wife in all the college comedies. He belongs to the Give Club and warbles as softly as any bulbul. Ill in all, he's a nice, seveet little girl behind the footlights, but when he knucks the stage petiticoats for the leather headgear he's one tough perion, take it from the Columbia team. He didn't score any touchdowns nor did he chak up any kicks for the extra boint, but he was right in the middle of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and knecked of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and knecked of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and knecked of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and knecked of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and knecked of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and knecked of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and knecked of every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and succeeding every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and succeeding every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and succeeding every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and succeeding every scoring plus by Dartmouth, and he ran back punts and succeeding every scoring five touchdowns in the middle of every scoring five touchdown in the first period. Calcier that gase that were heaped upon him for his work in the Harvard game two workes back.

It was a 60-yard run around left end by Calcier that gave Dartmouth its ouchdown in the first period. Calcier and the color of the period and punts of the punts and the punts of the punts sure he was not going to miss the idek that might mean victory for the Blue and White. He took his time, waited for Burtt to place the ball at the right angle on the heap of dirt. L. T. and booted the pigskin fairly between the goal posts.

The big boys from Hanover had cored a touchdown in the first period ad were leading by 6 to 0 at the start of the third. After a few scrimmages id an exchange of punts, Calder carded the ball to the Columbia 35-yard ne. Tired of plunging off tackle for iffing gains of ten yards or so, he aved a long forward pass that was tended for Lynch or Bjorkmen, of a visiting delegation. Burtt cut across he field, however, speared the ball that leap into the air, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six that was the leap into the sir, and tore six the sir that the leap into the sir, and tore six the sir that the leap into the sir, and tore six the sir that the leap into the sir the sir that ne. Tired of plunging off tackle for lifting gains of ten yards or so, he haved a long forward pass that was tended, for Lynch or Bjorkmen, of a visiting delegation. Burtt cut across he field, however, speared the ball ith a leap into the air, and tore sixplife yards down the sidelfnes for he Columbia touchdown. Ben Roder-kled earned the extra point with a leak from placement, and the Columbia trass band exploded in a triumphant last of discord.

From a local point of view, that could have been the logical place to sall it a day, but Dartmouth insisted pon finishing out the game, and in oing so they incidentally incided Coumbia. The Blue and White aggregation changed colors in the late part of the festive fracas and emerged a delicate mixture of black and blue.

The visitors made good use of the third quarter. Sparrow and Levie through center for consistent rains, Sparrow finally scoring through right guard in less than five minutes. Zimmerman made his second touchdown on an intercepted pass, followed by line plunges. A further score came a moment later when Shea kicked the ball over the bar from the 15-yard line.

Rutgers Trounces N. Y. U., 37-0; Schres and Hawley Injured ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 18.—Rutgers used twenty-four players to wallop New York University, 37 to 0, here this afternoon, but most of them had nothing much to do. They merely made things easy for Maloney and Dickinson, a forward passing pair 'way above average and for diminutive Matty Ray. Ray stands 4 feet 11½ inches tall, but he takes his bumps and knocks like a heavyweight and gives in return the niftiest football performances imaginable.
